

Stylesheets are collections of menus. These collections pop up all at once in a group. This group does not disappear until all menus in it have been dealt with, and the user signals that he is done.

Stylesheets are intended to be used in situations wherein the computer wants an answer to several related questions all at once. One example is font selection. To select a font, the user needs to specify font family (Classic, Modern, etc.), font size